CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 12 .- In addition to his attempt to bag a hitting outfielder in the big baseball draft scheduled to be held in Cincinnati next Monday, Clark Griffith also hopes to have awarded to him two or three left-hand twirlers, who have been watched by Mike Kahoe in the tall grass. Indeed, that he may get at least two or three, the Nationals' boss has put in requisitions for ten, thinking it certain that he must land at least three out of this number.

"The draft is baseball luck pure and simple," said Clark Grifth. "I want to get certain players, but there is no certainty that I shall get any of those most particularly want, However, I shall try to get at least one good southpaw pitcher out of the draft. That's enough for me. southpaw and one outfielder. With these I can afford to plan for another season, and see myself with a chance to land the banner."

Though still a bit weak from failure to eat, Eddie Ainsmith is much improved, and Trainer Martin expects to have him in uniform before the end of Real cool weather has at last met the team on its Western faunt. Yesterday was a perfect day, and chill winds from the lake make vests comfortable today. This should prove of considerable benefit to the Nationals, who are complaining about Washington's warm and muggy August weather.

Tonight the team leaves by boat for Detroit, arriving in the City of Straits tomorrow morning in time for breakfast. Three games will be played with the Jungaleers before the long ride to St. Louis commences. Griffith is now trying to hook up an exhibition contest somewhere in southern Ohlo to break up this long jump to Missouri. Next Tuesday the Nationals will play in St.

Poor Baseball, Coupled With Woeful Loss of Rest, Causes Griffith's Team to Lose to The Naplanders.

By "SENATOR."

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 12.-Bad the ninth and did manage to shove an baseball on several occasions, coupled with a woeful lack of the sleep wallop, did for the Nationals in the second battle with the Naplanders, and second battle with the Naplanders, and a doub Walter Johnson dropped a close contest rolled to Chapman, putting McBride on by a score of 3 to 2. Misplays accounted third, from where he tallied when Johnfor two of the three Cleveland tailles, fiendish heaves by Eddie Foster and John, Henry doing the trick. Then, when the Nationals had chances to tally, they just couldn't hit the pill.

Joe Birmingham shook up his batting order and sent Fred Blanding back again to see if he could succeed where he had failed the day before. The big blonde got away with it largely because Johnson was unsteady at the start, the Nationals were guilty of lurid pegging, and were anxious to a degree with the willow. There's the game in a nutshell.

The twisted batting order proved of considerable assistance to the Naplanders, for Larry Lajole came through with a handsome swipe in the opening sesfor two of the three Cleveland tallies, a handsome swipe in the opening ses-sion that scored two runs. His second drive put Jackson on third, from where he scored on Henry's painful peg to center field in the third.

center field in the third.

Though beaten, the Nationals were ever dangerous. They kept George Kahler warming up in right field until the last inning, for Birmingham couldn't tell what minute the Griffmen would pound Blanding from the mound or he would be compelled to surrender by his own wildness. However, he managed to last out the game, and all's well that ends well.
